Hereditary Prince Alois Maintains His Position on Abortion Law Reform and Welcomes Consideration of Targeted Improvements

20 October 2026 – Hereditary Prince Alois of Liechtenstein has devoted considerable attention in recent months to the popular initiative proposing the introduction of a time-limit regime for abortion, as well as to broader issues relating to abortion, and has held numerous discussions on the subject. Following careful consideration, he remains convinced that the proposed reform is not compatible with ensuring adequate protection of unborn life as a fundamental legal value. The Hereditary Prince will therefore withhold his sanction from the bill adopted by the Landtag on 2 September 2026 introducing a time-limit regulation in Liechtenstein.

At the same time, the Hereditary Prince sees opportunities to further develop the existing framework, which has been in force since 2015, through targeted measures. For example, he is open to lifting the advertising ban and supports efforts to improve information, counselling and support for women before, during and after pregnancy.

“I am convinced that many people share the objective of providing the best possible support to women in difficult situations while at the same time protecting unborn life,” said Hereditary Prince Alois.
